DISCUSSION QUESTIONS:

1. When you look at the world, do you think evil is increasing or decreasing? Why or why not?
2. This weekend we continue our preaching series, “Fractured,” that corresponds with the journey of Lent and also continues our walk through Genesis by looking at Genesis 4-11.

This week we look at a long stretch of Scripture from Genesis 4:17-6:8. Begin your study in prayer by asking God to speak to you through His Word, and then, whether you’re on your own or with a group, read that entire Scripture text aloud.

3. What stands out to you about Cain and his descendants as described in Genesis 4:17-24?
4. Some scholars see a subtle critique in 4:17, 20-22) of the assumption that human development (cities, technology, the arts) is automatically a good thing. What do you think about this?
5. 4:25-27 brings a sort of “restart” for Adam and Eve. What do you notice about this new generation and what follows?
6. Genesis 5 provides an important connection between Adam and Eve by use of the toledot (“This is the account of...”) structure. As you read through this chapter, what captures your attention about some of these people and their lives?
7. Sometimes we skip over the genealogies in the Bible. Why might it be valuable for the original readers of them? What does it communicate to us today?
8. Genesis 6:1-4 is a very odd portion of this story. Summarize in your own words what happens here. Why might this be significant to the story of the expanding reach of evil?
9. With 6:5-8, we receive a deep commentary from God about the state of humanity. How would you describe the situation of humanity as recorded in verse 5?
10. What do you notice about God in verses 5-8? What does God notice, feel, and do?
11. Why might verse 8 be important, not only for the upcoming story, but also for our understanding of God and what God is doing?
12. What is one thing God is revealing to you through this study? If you’re on your own, write that down, pray over it, and share it with someone this week. If you are with a small group, share your answers with one another before closing in prayer.
